THE PLATFORM.

Declaration of Principles by the Democratic State Convention

The resolutions adopted by the Democratic State Convention at Williamsport on Wednesday are as follows

First The Democratic party in State Convention assembled hereby renews its allegiance to and declares its faith in the principles of Democracy as formulated by Jefferson and illustrated by Madison, Monroe, Jackson and Cleveland It congratulates the American people upon the first fruits of the Democratic Administration, which inherited from its Republican predecessor a bankrupt Treasury and unwise financial legislation, impaired public credit and widespread disaster, and which under the sagacious courageous, and patriotic leadership of its great President Grover Cleveland, led the people out of the slough of despond to the high ground of substantial and increasing prosperity

We challenge the fairness of our countrymen and ask that the Democratic party now receive the benefit of that renewed prosperity whose welcome note is heard on every side

Second The enactment of the Sherman silver-purchasing act and the McKinley tariff law found as accurately predicted by Mr Cleveland their results in bankrupt railroads, closed factories, ruined farms abandoned fields, impaired national credit and general disaster The repeal of such iniquitous legislation and the substitution of more moderate tariff laws have found their immediate results in the resumption of business and the restoration of the national credit

Third As vindicating the principles of tariff reform, to which the Democracy is unalterably pledged, we challenge especial attention to the fact that such prosperity and the consequent material increase of wages has been most pronounced in the industries whose existence our opponents claimed were dependent upon high tariff duties The gloomy prediction that the iron and steel industries of Pennsylvania would be destroyed by a reduced tariff has been contradicted by their present unexampled prosperity

Fourth We invite the attention of the wage earners to the fact that the present voluntary increase of wages of those employed in the manufacturing industries amounting to not less than $250,000,000 was absolutely unknown under the McKinley tariff act To prevent the reactionary legislation threatened by the Republican party of Pennsylvania in their recent State Convention which would again depress business by destroying faith in the stability of present conditions, we invite our fellow countrymen throughout the land, irrespective of party to so act together as to insure by the election of a Democratic President in 1896 the maintenance of the present prosperity

Fifth We especially reaffirm so much of the platform of the last Democratic National Convention as calls for the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value, or be adjusted by international agreement or by such safeguard of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals, and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the payment of debts We believe that such parity could not be maintained by the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 and we are, therefore opposed to any legislation looking to that end

Sixth We arraign and condemn the presence State Administration both in the executive and legislative branches of the Government, for its refusal to reapportion the State in accordance with the mandates of the Constitution for its profligate waste of public money for its creation of private awards and useless public offices, for its degradation of the public services in factional contests for its unnecessary increase of official salaries to the detriment of many deserving charities of State for its legislation favorable to the interests of corporations and monopolies

Seventh We challenge comparison between this State Administration which has been so faithless to its pledges, and the wise economical and honest Administration of Robert E Pattison which in the stainless purity of its record silenced partisan malignity and justly merited and received the almost universal approbation of the people of this Commonwealth

Eighth We especially invite the sober consideration of the people of this State to the remarkable factional struggle in the Republican party a struggle which involved no principle or public policy, but simply the supremacy of contending factional leaders The worst arraignment at our hands of Republican misrule falls short of what representative Republican newspapers and leaders testified of each other The admitted prostitution of the public service the invocation of corporate influence the misuse of judicial appointments and the consequent prostitution of the Judiciary the corrupt use of money in the purchase of delegates the attempted terrorism at Harrisburg by men of the most abandoned type, fix the high water mark of political debauchery It but needed to complete its infamy the transparent hypocrisy, which led a convention, thus constituted to adopt "with laughter" resolutions condemning the very methods by which its delegates had been selected Such condemnation of "The growing use of money in politics the corporate control of the Legislature municipal Councils, political primaries and elections the enslavement of public officers and employes favoritism in granting contracts and the granting of exclusive franchises in public necessities" while valuable as evidencing the truth of the accusations of the Democratic party in the last quarter of a century, yet coming from the very source which is responsible for these evils, constitutes the crowning insult to the intelligence of a forbearing and long suffering people

The Illinois Democracy.

The cause of sound currency is steadily gaining ground throughout the country, and especially in the rank of the Democratic party Following the successful convention of the Sound Money Democrats of Nebraska come cheering reports of the movement of the Illinois Democracy against the silver fanatics In Illinois the temporary advantage gained by the silverites through control of the Democratic State Committee promises to be of little permanent value to them The silver tide has reached its highest mark in that State and is now rapidly receding The humbugs of Coin's Financial School have been exposed, and by next year the Democrats of Illinois will enter upon a vigorous campaign to completely wrest the control of their organization from the enemies of sound money From present indications there is little doubt that the majority of the Illinois delegation in the next National Democratic Convention will favor an honest money candidate for President upon an honest money platform

PEOPLE who do not now know it will find out when they have occasion to buy their winter shoes that there is a Leather Trust in the United States which controls 80 per cent. of the tanneries. The Trust has advanced the price of sole leather about 100 per cent The increased price of green hides has doubtless increased the cost of manufactured leather, but the price of hides has been largely manipulated by the Trust, preparatory to pinching the buyer of leather There is no possible warrant for the extreme advance demanded.

For the Calamity Editor.

A SYMPOSIUM OF PROSPERITY

The latest number of The American Magazine of Civics gives a valuable contribution to the economic literature of the day in a series of admirable letters from various and distinguished financiers Washington E. Conner, who represents large Wall street interests, contributes the first article of a series of five excellent papers "There can be no question," says he, "but business in every direction is improving and the outlook is very promising" He regards the silver agitation as the cause of all our financial woes because it has shaken the confidence of people both at home and abroad "England's financial views," says Mr Conner, "is the key foundation upon which her immense commercial greatness rests, and let it be once understood that we in the United States are as firm as England and our influence would be as great as hers if not greater, in the commercial world to-day" He believes that the silver craze will "soon come to an end," and that foreign capital will pour into this country and bring better times and a greater increase of business than we have experienced since the Government was founded

"The prosperity that has now set in," says John Claflin, "seems permanent When the farmer in the North gets a better price for his grain and the farmer in the South 50 per cent of an advance for his cotton he will not give much heed to the nostrums of the free silver men We have nothing to fear from this source, things were not better for years and every matter is sure to come right in the end"

The sanguine views of Mr Conner and Mr Claflin are not shared by the Hon William P St John He insists that the price of wheat is "set absolutely by the volume of our current money Therefore, if we enlarge the volume of money by re opening the mints to silver we shall raise the normal price of all commodities"—a plausible argument indeed from the free coiner's point of view but one whose best refutation is its clear and simple statement Mr George Gunton's opinions smack rather unpleasantly of narrow partisanship This gentleman seems to have hitched his wagon to the star of "politics" rather than to that of economics He traces all revival of business to the result of the election of 1894—an opinion that is commendable more for its ardent zeal than for its temperately thoughtful character The symposium is concluded by a paper from Mr Frederic R Coudert, who is inclined to "look at the future with an optimistic eye" The prospect of better times is very bright with M Coudert The only thing that can postpone the happy days to come is a reckless juggling with the national credit "There are many dealers in the great centres of the European continent who fear that we may some day break faith with them We should be careful that no slipshod expression of petulant irritation shall encourage such a heresy Let us keep our name untarnished even from suspicion and the rest will follow"

No finer or wiser words could have been uttered than the last sentence of Mr Coudert's paper At one stroke of the pen it suggests the critical position of the United States in the financial world, and states clearly and unmistakable the results of reckless financiering The American Magazine of Civics is surely doing an excellent work in the line of politics and economics Its latest number is well in keeping with the high standard which the magazine has always maintained —Phila Record

About Lies and Politics.

The poet, it is said, lies for pleasure the merchant for profit And they may both claim superiority in that their lies have an object, whereas the mass of men lie for the lie's sake Yet the lies most in vogue are "but shadows of lies" They do not sink deep, nor deeply affect character They are lies of civility, social lies that have no purpose other than to oil the wheels and make the social machinery run smoothly Yet they are to be deprecated, for truth "is the sovereign good of human nature"

But what shall be said of political lies? These not only demoralize the individual but they may ruin the State They seek to tarnish the character of public men with the view to destroy their influence and to overthrow them at the polls In a large sense the afflictions of Job and the felicities of Solomon are comparatively but as dust in the balance The individual suffers or enjoys, but the world goes on When, however, a public man whose principles and public acts are bound up with the public weal and intimately promote it is misrepresented as to his character, principles and deeds a blow is struck at the Commonwealth itself And yet this is the blow the corrupt politician is continually dealing His object is spoils, his weapon defamation.

Men necessarily differ as to measures, as to the interpretation of the Constitution, as to what is wise or unwise in the conduct of public affairs, and moreover as to the fitness of individuals for office In these differences parties are formed, and their efforts on the hustings and at the polls stimulated These differences and these efforts, when they do not incite to unwholesome party strife promote patriotism, arouse the people to an interest in public affairs and render them watchful of the public interests In their effect they are educational They teach the people the nature of their Government and the sort of measures that are likely to strengthen it on the one hand, or to undermine it on the other Campaigns of education are stimulating, and give dignity to politics Campaigns for spoils or for mere party triumph and campaigns won by defamation are a degradation, a dishonor and a continual danger to the State —Record

"MY wife went downtown to-day in all the rain to buy something that she couldn't do without, and she parted with it almost as soon as she got home." "Wasn't that rather a strange proceeding?" "Not at all, she bought a comb."—King's Jester.

SYMPATHIZING FRIEND—"I'm sorry to learn that your marriage with the rich American heiress is an unhappy one. Is it on account of her disposition?" Impecunious Foreign Prince—"Yees—her desposeetion to handle all ze money herself"—Chicago Tribune.

THE GIRL I LOVED AT SCHOOL

When the mellow days of Autumn wrap the hills in purple haze
And the sun seems all the dearer for the shortness of the days
Comes a lovely apparition through the mists of other years
And I don't know why it is so that my eyes will swim with tears—
For I hate to judge emotions by the text book's rote and rule
And I only know I'm thinking of the girl I loved at school

Of the deepest brownest velvet are the sweetly thoughtful eyes
And the cheeks are like the roses that our grannies used to prize—
Not the pampered pinky blossoms that the hot house man deals out
At four dollars for a dozen and with pasteboard wrapped about—
But the dear old damask roses that would hold their tints till Yule—
Just the sort I used to gather for the girl I loved at school

And the lips—no no not ruby! for the cold [illegible] of the [illegible]
Chills the jewel's burnished surface though the fiery rays may shine
Or the glaring of the gaslight filter far do they compare
With the warm glow in yon chalice the same fragrance lingers there
The same thrill runs through me as when on the organ stool
My lips first pressed the pulsing lips of her I loved at school

And the form it grows distincter as the misty veil grows thin
And the silver belt that linked her like the serpent shutting in
All that earth retained of heaven [illegible] out [illegible] fool
For I [illegible] my anger from the girl I loved at school
And I know not if the fleeting of the purple Autumn days
Brings us nearer to the greeting at the meeting four ways
If it be I may not meet her till we've crossed the Stygian pool
Yet I think that I shall greet her as the girl I loved at school —[illegible]

THE LITTLE LOG CHURCH.

Down in the heart of the mountains is a summer resort It is not in the north nor of the south, but it is a cosmopolitan little city of hotels It sprung up in a season and will endure as long as the waters are limpid and the mountains grand Crowning the highest hill is the chief hotel The view from the veranda is magnificent The lower hilltops, rugged and scarred, near by, seem to grow level in perspective stretching away in a vast plain of darkest green to meet the blue sky in the distant horizon The morning wind brings the odor of wild roses the evening wind is freighted with the spice of pines

The Chalmers mother and daughter, were guests of the chief hotel

"It is exquisite," said Miss Chalmers "I am weary of society I will do nothing but rest for the entire summer"

Miss Chalmers rested four entire days The fifth day was Sunday

"We must go to church," said Mrs Chalmers

"But there is no church, mamma, the minister is taking his vacation in the city while we take ours in the hills"

"I shall go to church," declared the elder lady "There is a lovely log church in the country I went to a log church when I was a little girl We will go to-day in a carriage"

So the Chalmerses went to church, not to the little white church in the valley below them but over miles and miles of gravelly ridge road, down a long steep hill and into another and a larger valley where there was a pellucid stream, shaded with sycamores and festooned with a bewildering tangle of vine

The country church was built of rough hewn logs and was not large Mrs Chalmers and her daughter found that the house was crowded, and as there was no usher obtained seats with some difficulty

Miss Chalmers was on the right of the centre aisle She soon discovered that the aisle separated the two sexes, that she alone, of all the women there, was seated among the men This breach of local etiquette amused her at first

Miss Chalmers soon discovered that the younger boys were nudging each other with their elbows and laughing at her The young men looked at her curiously, she began to feel nervous, and the feeling annoyed her more than the attention she was receiving Then she noticed that the girls across the aisle were giggling and whispering maliciously, and yes actually pointing their fingers at her

How dared they! Her face began to flame The young men looked sympathetic, now, she felt that their pity was an outrage The preacher could no longer hide his annoyance, for nobody heeded the sermon now, and everybody was intent upon that young lady, who knew no better than to sit among men

Mrs Chalmers, who had fortunately found a seat on the upper side, was the only person in the house ignorant of her daughter's embarrassment The long ride had wearied her She was resting, as elderly persons sometimes do She listened earnestly to the sermon, without hearing a word, she gazed at the preacher and did not see him

Miss Chalmers tried to call up her pride, but was helpless before the ridicule, which constantly became more unmerciful The benches on the other side all seemed to be full She saw no escape but to leave the room. She had just decided to bolt ignominiously for the door when there was a diversion in her favor

Immediately in front of Miss Chalmers sat a young man He had aroused her interest, because he wore what she called a respectable coat, and because he had a fine head which he carried on his magnificent shoulders like a Roman hero, and because—well, there is no stronger word than because It can mean a great many inexpressible things

This young man arose, and the girl noticed, even in her unhappiness, that he was very tall as most mountaineers are He stepped across the aisle and took a little girl in his arms, whispering a word to the child's mother before he returned to his seat He did not look at Miss Chalmers, but the woman smiled to her, silently pointing to the vacant seat

The unhappy young lady was only too glad to accept the invitation. Her mother did not notice the incident, nor did the young man seem to be aware of it He did not once turn his head, and she found herself becoming curious about the color of his eyes. They must be gray.

The driver from the chief hotel had not entered the church As he lingered with his horses two men came by in a wagon The men were old friends of the driver In the bed of the wagon, shaded by some branches of the pawpaw tree, there was a jug; and the liquor in the jug was the driver's dearest and most fatal enemy. There were three men in the wagon when it halted beneath the trees a hundred yards below the church While the horses ate the men drank

When the sermon was over Mrs Chalmers and her daughter ate their luncheon. Afterward, while the ladies plucked May apple blossoms and enjoyed the cool dampness which the river exhaled, the driver slept. He awoke often in a melancholy mood, but they did not notice it, and each time when he threw off his slumbers he resorted to the jug which had somehow been left behind by the men in the wagon.

Later in the afternoon the driver, whose depression had increased since the sun sank, hitched up his horses, and the carriage began the ascent of the long hill The jug was left among the May apple blossoms It was empty

Half way up the hill a wheel dropped into a deep gutter and the carriage came down with a lurch and a crash. It was a hopeless wreck The driver looked at the broken wheel with indifference and the ladies were in consternation

"How far is it to town?" asked Miss Chalmers.

"About eight miles, I reckon"

"Oh, dear, what can we do?"

"I dunno," said the driver, stupidly From his manner one might be justified in saying that he did not care

"Well driver," said Miss Chalmers emphatically, "I know You must go to town at once for another carriage It is now 3 o'clock, and you can be back by 6, we will wait"

The driver began to unloose the horses He did not seem to be pressed for time

"You must hurry," she declared, impatiently "And say, driver, if you are back by sunset you shall have $5 extra"

He shook off his apathy, or seemed to, and, mounted on one horse, led the other rapidly away

It was always bad to wait In this case the two lonely women, oppressed by the strange solitary surroundings, found the afternoon almost interminable The Joshua of impatience seemed to stay the sun at one spot for hours Six o'clock finally came, they were expectant Half past six, they were anxious At seven they were alarmed The sun loitered no more, but rolled swiftly over the opposite mountain and drew the day with him They were terrified

There was no house and no human being in sight They remembered no habitation on the road for miles True, the log church stood in the bottom below, but the darkest shadows had already gathered there They dared not enter the profound obscurity which enveloped the valley and which crept like a living thing up the mountain side toward them They clung to each other like little children and wept

At sunset a tall young man was riding soberly along the wide road which led to town He stopped suddenly at the sight of two harnessed horses grazing by the roadside

"I know that team, what has happened?"

There was no one to answer the question, but he looked about and discovered the driver under the trees

"Here, wretch!" he exclaimed "wake up, tell me what is wrong Wake up, wake Where are the ladies?"

But expostulation was in vain The driver was a lump of clay—a log The young man mounted his horse again and galloped furiously back toward the log church He looked at each side of the road anxiously, but he did not slacken his pace, and the horse was covered with foam when he reached the broken carriage and dismounted

"I thank heaven you are safe," he cried

"But we are not safe, we are lost, lost Oh, merciful, sir, pity us!" exclaimed Mrs Chalmers, hysterically She thought the tall stranger was a brigand

Miss Chalmers knew better She recognized the young man, and a feeling of security, almost of happiness, swept over her

"Hush, mamma," she said softly, "we are perfectly safe now This gentleman will protect us, he has come to help us"

The gentleman looked his thanks for the confidence It was almost dark, but she could see that his eyes were gray She thought they were luminous, but she was looking through her tears

"Are you employed at the hotel? What happened to our driver? Is the other carriage coming?" The mother asked three questions in a breath

"I am not employed at the hotel I was riding to town and found your driver in a drunken sleep by the road-side You will get no help from him I was afraid there had been a serious accident and hastened back"

"Serious," asked Mrs Chalmers in a high voice, "is it not serious? Oh, dear, dear, what would you have?"

"My uncle lives two miles down the river," said the stranger "It is the nearest house. You will come with me for the night and to-morrow you can return to the town."

"You are very kind," said Miss Chalmers "We will go with you gladly"

"But two miles," protested the mother "I cannot walk two miles"

"It is not necessary, you can ride my horse He is perfectly gentle, and I will hold the rein," said their rescurer reassuringly, and the young lady may ride behind you, if she will"

"Oh, no, I would much prefer to walk I can walk two miles easily, and the dear horse is already very tired Indeed, I will walk, said the young lady decidedly.

The young man assisted the mother into the saddle The daughter clung lightly to his arm and the little procession moved slowly down the long hill and into the starless depths of the bottom. They traveled carefully, for Mrs Chalmers was not a good horse-woman It was an hour before they reached the farm-house.

An hour! An hour is an epoch, an age, an eternity. Love which never dies, is born, nourished and reaches maturity in an hour.

There was a camp-meeting in progress at the log house in the valley. On the last Sunday of the meeting, which happened to be also the last day of the Chalmerses' visit in the mountains, a party from the chief hotel visited the revival. The party was composed of Mrs Chalmers, Miss Chalmers and a tall young man with a serious, grand face. The latter had been a guest at the hotel for only three weeks, or since the two ladies had been abandoned on the mountain side by their drunken driver.

On the afternoon of this Sunday the two younger members of the party were half-way up the long hill which leads from the valley to the ridges They were standing silently side by side looking down into the valley.

There was a great white tent, a tabernacle, indeed, near the log house, and a score of smaller white tents about the large one Through the trees the people could be seen moving about like pigmies

"It is a beautiful and peaceful scene," said Miss Chalmers, softly

The young man was silent and she presently continued, with some hesitation

"I have never thanked you—I hardly know how—for your kindness that first day in the church when I made such an embarrassing mistake"

"It was nothing do not think of it."

"But I do think of it it was a great deal to me, and I want you to remember—you know we are going away to morrow—I want you to remember that I appreciate it My predicament was almost as bad as it was that night when you again—"

"I beg you," he broke in, "not to mention those things again"

She was silent He turned to her suddenly, abruptly, almost roughly, and asked

"Are you rich?"

She trembled a little, but did not reply

"I am surprised that you asked that question," she said gently, "it is unworthy of you, it is painful to me"

"Forgive me," he said, humbly "Oh my dear, I love you and I am poor Your beauty and your goodness make you a long way above me, and I have hoped that you were not rich. But I adore you I want you to carry that memory away in your heart I adore you Some time I will come and ask you to marry me You will have known me longer, my prospects will be brighter I will come and take you by the hand like this, my dear I will say 'I love you dearly I have loved you since that first day in the mountains I will love you forever Will you be my wife?'

"When I ask you that question, when my soul waits for an answer, what will you say to me dear?"

She was placid, she dare not look at him

"Is there no grain of hope for me? Oh, love, will you tell me what your answer will be on that day?"

With a supreme effort she raised her eyes to his face She tried to speak she was speechless, but her lips formed a single word

"Yes"

* * * * * *

Dear reader, she was rich She was rich and proud, and the next day she returned to her magnificent home in the city And two years afterward, when a tall young man came and asked again that question, when his soul waited for an answer, what do you think she said?

"Yes"

She was only a summer girl, she met this poor youth on a summer holiday, but she loved him for ever, and they are now very happy 1861---1895.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal

For the second time the Grand Army of the Republic crosses Mason and Dixon's line, but the circumstances are very different from what they were thirty-four years ago A generation has intervened, and the lapse of a third of a century brings wonderful changes It is the reverse of the situation described by the Scottish poet—

Thrice have I sought Clan Alpine's glen
In peace but when I come again
I come with banner brand and bow
As leader seeks his mortal foe

The year 1861 was one that must be ever memorable in American annals Its beginning found the American people in a peculiar condition of unrest, hopeful of peace apprehensive of war Each month brought new complications until the firing upon Sumter resolved all doubts as to whether peace was to be preserved.

North of Mason and Dixon's line the effect of this event was electrical Of what occurred in the South it is not our present purposes to speak, that not being relevant to the matter before us It is not too much to say, however, that the outburst of feeling surprised everybody in both sections No one who was old enough at that time to note the current of events can ever forget it There has been nothing comparable to it within the recollection of any one now living The indignation the fervor, the intense activity, the rapidity with which a nation of farmers, merchants shopkeepers and professional men transformed itself into an armed camp were bewildering The exaltation of feeling among the people was unprecedented The great centres of population naturally felt the impulse first, and regiments were formed as if by magic But the rural districts were not far behind The news ran through them faster than the fiery cross ever travelled through the Highlands The farmer left the plough in the furrow, and hastened to the nearest recruiting station The mills and shops were emptied of their employes State vied with State and city with city in arming for the fray The "dreadful note of preparation" was heard in every quarter

The scenes that followed this sudden transition from peace to war were such as are common to all wars, but the enthusiasm that mingled with the partings was such as is only known in great national uprisings Along with the patriotic fervor, the high purpose, the pomp and circumstance, there were intense anguish, suffering, and sacrifice The mother girded her first-born for the fray, gave him her blessing, and retired to her closet to weep and pray The maiden speeded the departure of her lover with smiles and kisses, but tears mingled with the parting in spite of her high purpose. For the time the lot of those left behind was harder than that of those who went away Those felt the thrill of a nation rising in arms. They went out confident of speedy victory, full of high hopes of distinction—

Glory before and love behind
Marshalled proud chivalry'

It is needless to say that most of those who thus rushed to arms had very inadequate ideas of what was before them Many thought it was but a holiday trip, and that the trouble would be over in a month or two And a few fancied it would be over before they got there Some peril on the edge of battle they were all, perhaps, prepared to meet But the dreary waiting in camp, the struggle for life in the hospital, the fatigues of the rapid march, the interminable pining in military prisons, the cold, the damp, the heat, the miasma, occasional hunger in the trenches, the thousand and one major and minor miseries of military life were unknown to most of those who left the plough, the shop, and the loom to transform themselves into soldiers More than that, they were not prepared for the sharp sting of defeat, the terror of flight, the heart-sickness of hope deferred. Many illusions were dispelled before it was given to any of them to return to their homes

It is quite true that these mistakes were made on both sides. The two sections had lived so far apart that they did not know each other in any tolerable degree. They were destined to get acquainted under circumstances that would leave no doubts to be resolved in future. If the South had paraphrased the words of Lady Macbeth—

"The raven himself is hoarse
That crooks the fatal entrance of Duncan
under my battlements"—

it would have expressed not only what many of her people felt, but actually what took place in the early years of the war. But the Southern men also early realized that they had underrated the magnitude of the struggle before them

It is necessary to recall events in order to heighten the contrast with this second coming. The Grand Army again enters the gateway of the South, but under far different circumstances There are here no bloody hands to welcome foes to hospitable graves, as of yore On the contrary, we welcome them as friends and brothers, compatriots and Americans, whose laurels are the common heritage, whose imperishable renown makes luminous the pages of our common history Our hearts and homes are open to them, our citizens are anxious to do them honor They will not remain with us so long as they did before, but they will have a good deal more fun—at least, if they do not, it shall not be our fault.

Such a spectacle as we shall have in Louisville this week would, perhaps be impossible in any other country. In the United States we are good fighters, but we are not long haters We fight out our differences, and dismiss them. We are too busy, and, let us hope, too sensible and too patriotic, to keep alive the animosities of a day that has gone forever and ever by The "late unpleasantness" was no child's play while it lasted, but it was fought out to its logical result, and all classes are prepared to accept it and to discard the passions which it excited. We have built up the waste place, have buried the past, and turn our faces resolutely to the future with confidence in the great destiny which our united efforts will create. When we look back to 1861 we cannot but wonder at the mysterious way along which a beneficent Providence has led a great people through the havoc of war and fratricidal strife to peace, prosperity and fraternity.

Fifty Thousand Veterans in the Grand Parade—Marred by a Sad Accident

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 11—Fifty thousand veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic marched through the crowded and decorated streets of Louisville to-day The Northern veterans received a greeting to day as different as the imagination can picture from that accorded them thirty four years ago in this gateway of the South As the thousands of "Yankees" plodded through the streets to-day thousands of "Johnnies" grew hoarse in cheering them along the way, and the ladies were no less enthusiastic Portraits of the old Generals were seen along the line of march

The parade was headed some distance in front of the first grand division by two distinguished ex Confederates on horseback—Capt John H Weller and Capt. William H Harrison They did not wear the gray, but were dressed in black Prince Alberts with silk hats, and red, white and blue sashes, the same as members of the citizen's committee They also wore red, white and blue scarfs and rosettes Captain Weller carried a very large flag, and the stars and stripes were proudly borne by him Captain Harrison carried a very large white banner of peace, mounted on a staff like the stars and stripes carried by his Confederate comrade The two flags were alike in every respect except in the colors, one being all pure white In place of the eagle on the top of the staff the white banner had a dove carrying an olive twig, designating peace and good-will The conception of these two ex-Confederates at the head of the great procession of ex-federal soldiers with their respective flags was that of Col. Henry S Cohn, chairman of the committee on parade and review

The committees on horseback drum corps, bands and carriages, with the Governor of Kentucky, mayor of Louisville commander in chief of the Grand Army and staff followed in order, and then came the veterans from the different States, grouped into divisions

Pennsylvania had the old war-horse Ned on a float The New Hampshire department carried a large eagle The Ohio boys all wore buckeyes, the Kentuckians had corn and crackers and others bore the emblems of their States

ACCIDENTAL EXPLOSION

Three members of Battery A, Kentucky National Guard, and a colored driver were killed about 5 30 o clock Wednesday morning by the explosion of a caisson containing sixty-six pounds of powder, on Broadway, between Third and Fourth streets, Louisville while the battery was on the way to Phoenix Hill for the purpose of firing a salute of forty four guns in connection with the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic Two other members of the company were wounded. The place where the accident occurred is one of the finest resident districts in the city. Fortunately few people were on the street, owing to the early hour, or the list of killed and injured would have been greatly increased Every window in the block was blown out Nearly every one in the neighborhood was asleep, and the noise and concussion caused by the explosion almost created a panic Half-clad men and terrified women came running from their homes and a most horrible sight met their eyes The accident cast a gloom over the entire city The young men killed were of the most prominent and wealthy families and leaders in society

Literary Notice.

All the matter of The Citizen for September might properly appear under the title of the first department Life and Education This publication deals with educational and reform movements in their broadest significance, it would make education a means of life, and men more helpful members of society

The current issue has editorials treating at length on free libraries and summer schools. Professor John M McFarlane, of the University of Pennsylvania contributes a timely article showing the influence of Thomas Henry Huxley in the movement of the present century which has led to the popularization of Natural Science. Dr Edmund J James writes on "Some Considerations on Our System of Education" and shows that our education development is keeping pace with our industrial and commercial development, and that, since the problems of education are never-ending, the means of education must be ever-expanding Dr Albert A Bird concludes his studies of Pennsylvania Election Laws with a general article showing, much to Pennsylvania's credit, the comparisons between her election machinery and that of cities in New York State and other large cities of the country There are notes on "Current Educational Movements in Great Britain," reviews of Leslie Stephen's Life of Sir James Fitz-James Stephen, and W R W Stephens' Life and Letters of Edward A Freeman, book notes and University Extension News and Announcements

THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

The ticket nominated by the Democratic State convention, as well as the way in which it was nominated, has the respect of all the people of both parties. The nominees are fair and liberal men and were nominated in a fair and liberal way. There was not a semblance of the bossism so characteristic of the late Republican convention.

The choice was made from seventeen of the best Democratic jurists of the State, any of whom would have been good nominees. Never has there been before any convention in Pennsylvania so large a number of thoroughly capable and in every way worthy men as in the Williamsport convention. The six nominated were carefully selected, and compose a ticket which is satisfactory to the whole Democratic party.

It is admitted by all that the ticket has more than the ordinary strength. It is predicted, and safely, that it will not only receive the whole Democratic vote but much Republican support as well.

The nomination of Hon. Benjamin F Meyers, of Harrisburg, for State Treasurer, will be conceded a strong selection. Mr. Meyers is one of the ablest men in his party in this State, and from his youth upward has been a steady and a stalwart defender of Democratic principles.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE ALMS-HOUSE.

Last Wednesday morning, bright and early, we received, by the hand of the Matron of the Alms-house, a paper on which there were certain figures. We, of course, publish them, if it is desired, but fail to see how they apply to the broken promises of which we spoke in last week's issue.

"Potatoes, 200 bu., last year 175 bu.; oats, this summer 558 bu., last year 367 bu.; hay, 125 loads—sold 47½ tons, last year 72 loads."

Mr. Panebaker does not mention the number of acres in each of these crops nor does he state the relative yields. If any explanation were required to be made of above figures we might remind the Steward that the good hay yield is due to the seeding done by the former officials, and that the present administration had nothing to do with it but cut it. We might say also that the manner of cutting this crop was an evidence of the poorest kind of farming. During hay making there were fifteen acres of grass down at one time. About eight acres had been cut and made ready to take in, but instead of doing that Mr. Panebaker sent the hands out to cut down seven acres more, and the outcome of it was that the whole lot was very much injured by the rain which followed. Certainly good farmers do not make hay in this manner, and Mr. Panebaker can not claim much credit for the good crop.

Upon inquiring we find that exactly twice as much land was put out in oats this year as last. Coupling this fact with the unusually good yield this year we come to the conclusion that the oats farming this year was not as good as last, even though the figures are larger.

When the Matron presented us with the above paper she had with her also a part of a loaf of bread which she desired us to inspect. It was, in so far as we saw, good bread but just why she presented it to us we do not know. We did not know anything about the Alms-house bread and did not, therefore, say anything about it. Since then, however, we have discovered that, except within the last few weeks, the bread has been very carelessly made. It is known that some of the people from the institution have bought bread from a baker whose wagon goes out that way. One of the Directors said some time ago that better attention would have to be given to the bread baking or some other arrangements would be made.

All this, however, has but little bearing on the facts stated in the COMPILER last week, yet the above may serve to evidence a condition which, it was feared, might exist if the Republican management got hold of the Alms-house through its calamity wailing. The desire after political capital often carries men entirely too far. If such capital can be made by showing a low account they are apt to save by stinting those who are unable to help themselves. We charge the Republican management with depriving the inmates of our Alms-house of the comforts and pleasure which they formerly had, in not giving them the food and attention which was formerly provided for them, and which the people of this county are willing that they should have. Any one who goes on the premises will notice a degree of carelessness which has not existed heretofore.

PARTIES AND ISSUES.

A political party is judged by the character of the government for which it is responsible. If the principles which it advances and its acts promote the good of the whole people it is the party which should control the government. That the people may know the different plans of the two great political parties each should have definite platform, principles for which to contend.

Tariff and currency will, according to present appearances, be the two great issues in the next Presidential campaign. How do the respective parties stand? On the Republican side all is uncertainty. Their latest expression, the declaration of the Iowa Republicans, drafted by Senator Allison, is a reaffirmation of the straddle made by the convention at Cleveland. The New York Tribune recently assured its readers that Republicans did not know what their opinions were. The Cleveland Convention locked its lips with a subterfuge. No leading candidate of that party for the Presidential nomination has spoken clearly and unambiguously on either of these great questions.

On the Democratic side no such condition prevails. The party occupies a position of strength. It stands on a definite policy commended by the President and the Secretary of the Treasury that is sound and Democratic. It has taken a stand for sound, safe money. Its present embarrassments will surrender to the substantial principles which the party represents.

On the tariff question one Republican faction demands a restoration of the highest protection; another thinks that the tariff issue is a safe one to let alone; neither knows what to do; either policy is fatal. Mr. Reed represents the latter faction, Gov. McKinley the former. A majority of the voters of this country will never return to McKinleyism.

Among the Democrats there is a general agreement that a lower tariff is best for our country. That a tariff which effects all alike is Democratic and that a high tariff is productive of trusts and favoritism. Not a single prediction made by the Republicans during the time when the present tariff was being formulated has been verified. On the contrary, every one of them has been falsified. Industries that were to be palsied are vigorous, wages that were to be reduced are rising, and labor that was to go idle is employed.

The Democrats are one in advocating a just and equal tariff. They are, with the exception of the difference in Kentucky, a unit in demanding sound money, whereas the Republicans in almost every case have avoided taking any stand on the money question, undertaking to please the silver cranks by avoiding a stand on this important issue.

On the leading questions, then, that will be before the voters for decision next year, the currency and the tariff, the position of the Democrats to-day is far the stronger and is growing better. It will be next year largely a matter of confidence on the part of the voters. Which of these two parties has shown itself the most trustworthy? The great, controlling business interest of the country cares less for parties than for security. The currency is with it the prime factor. On the one hand it sees a party that frankly avows its want of a policy, and, on the other, one that presents one that commands its approval. The floating, impressionable vote will reason more logically then than it did in 1894. It aided in the overthrow of the Democrats because it held them responsible for its misfortunes. It will now more accurately attribute the improved conditions to their legislation. This is the situation to-day, and each day betters it. It is this that inspires Democrats with courage and confidence that the verdict of 1894 will be reversed in 1896 and a new trial ordered.

WAS NOT THE "STAR" WRONG LAST WEEK?

It is to be regretted that the Star and Sentinel would make it appear that politics have entered into the administration of our public school affairs. Politics have not had, do not now have, and ought never to have any part in the consideration of questions which, even in the least degree, effect the relation of teacher and scholar.

One public school system is, like our trial by jury, held to be an institution too sacred to be influenced by any other consideration than justice and purity. Men are chosen to do jury duty, not because of their political affiliation, but because of their fitness to judge of causes. A jury is an institution of the people, not of the Court. It is responsible rather to the community than to the officials by whom it was selected. Should any politics enter into this selection or into the juries' verdicts justice would not only be imperfectly, but also corruptly, administered.

It is so with our public schools. They are an institution of the people and to the community teachers are responsible. Their selection by the Board of Directors is but a ratification of the system by which teachers have always been selected. Their appointment is made because of their usefulness and because of the preparation which they have made. It would be eminently wrong to consider them by their politics. Preparation and ability give the teacher a right, under a wise provision, to apply for and to teach in our public schools, irrespective of his or her political faith.

Purity and fairness in our public educational institutions is as important as the unbiased administration of justice. Politics must be kept out of both.

A Republican Board of Commissioners, immediately upon its taking office, appoints a Republican janitor to take care of the Court-house. A Republican Court, upon its installation, appoints a Republican crier and a messenger, deposing oftentimes the best of officers.

It is absurd to ask the question—Does a janitor effect the dispensation of justice? Certainly not, and therefor no exception is taken to the new appointment. Does the relation of the janitor to the business of the Court differ in any way from the relation of a janitor to the cause of public education? How can the selection of a janitor introduce politics in the public school if the appointment of a janitor does not likewise introduce politics into a Court of justice? These questions are well-nigh ridiculous, yet they are exactly to the point.

In the recent appointment by the School Board the facts are these: Three written applications for the position were before the Board at the June meeting, but it was moved by one of the Republican Directors, that, for certain proper reasons, the consideration of the question be postponed two months. When that time was up, the applications being in the hands of the Board, again the matter was considered, and decided by appointing a man who is thoroughly acquainted with the duties of the position and will make a good officer. It was certainly right for the Board to give attention to these applications and there was nothing wrong in any way in their making a change if they considered it best.

Does it not look as if the Star had done far more harm by attempting to make political capital out of this matter than the Board did by the proper change which it made?

A BUSINESS CONSIDERATION.

One of the most significant indications of the business revival is found in a recent interview with Mr. A. C. Delaney, Superintendent of the Richmond Locomotive and Machine Works—an establishment that constructs locomotives for the Big Four, Seaboard Air Line and Southern Railway Companies. "During the past two years," said he, "the business of this company has been steadily falling off. The decrease in orders began early in 1893 and continued uninterruptedly until March, 1895. At that time our works had almost suspended and shut down on account of the business depression and the consequently few orders on hand. Early in April, however, came a sudden and startling change. Orders began pouring in upon us during all the spring and summer months, and to-day the capacity of the company is taxed to its utmost to fill the contracts which it has made. In April nothing was done. To-day a thousand men are at work in the shops. The reason for this I am not prepared to give. I only know the facts." The reason is easily discoverable. It means that, until the credit of the country had been made secure, capital and all the forms of industrial activity were paralyzed, but that as soon as relief came through the wise and heroic financial measures of the Democratic Administration confidence returned in all trade circles; railway enterprises were given new life, and the demand for means of transportation was immediately increased in enormous proportions.

LET THE TARIFF ALONE.

The country has had enough tariff agitation, and the people don't want it revived by either party. It has had a most disastrous effect on trade and industry. Now that the agitation has ceased and the consequent business depression has disappeared it would be reckless and ruinous to revive it. Industry is reviving, business improving, wages advancing and better times coming. For heaven's sake let the tariff alone. Give the country a rest. Don't foment an agitation that can only have mischievous consequences. Business men, manufacturers and wage workers must all cry out against any further tariff tinkering.—New York Herald.

THE TURN OF THE LEAVES.

It is a good sign that the trade papers are paying increased attention to the importance of advertising. The Dry Goods Bulletin throws out the suggestion that one of the most effective methods of advertising is to select some one specialty and talk it. Push it out before the eye of every one. By urging some special thing this way more attention is secured than if a general statement be made.

The experience of most merchants will be that this is good advice—and it is timely.

State Millers' Association.

The annual convention of this association was held at Philadelphia last week. While it is the first since incorporation, is the eighteenth in the history of the body, which constitutes the largest organization of its kind in the country. Its membership of 250 was considerably increased before the close of the convention. W. G. Audenried, president of the Pennsylvania Milling and Export Co. read a paper in which the urged the millers to combine together for protection against the big mills which he contended are practically trusts and are operated to the disadvantage of the small miller. A resolution was adopted that the commercial exchanges of the country be requested to substitute after July 1, 1896 the cental measure of 100 pounds weight for grain in place of the bushel measure now used. Another resolution was adopted condemning the Belgian, French and German governments for placing an import duty upon American flour and requesting the President and congress to take retaliatory measures. Secretary Richardson and Treasurer Ladis Leyan of Lancaster were re-elected and the following were elected for the ensuing year: President Col. Asher Miner, of Wilkesbarre; Vice Presidents, Jacob V. Edge, of Downingtown and Nathan Sellers of Philadelphia; Directors B. F. Isenberg, Judge Cyrus Hoffa, Geo. T. Ingham and E. R. Freed. After the election of officers the convention adjourned.

VALKYRIE WITHDRAWS.

The America's cup races ended in a fiasco. Lord Dunraven withdrew the Valkyrie immediately after the start on Thursday, and the Defender sailed over the course alone. The America's Cup Committee decided that three races and the cup were awarded the gallant Defender, and the crowds afloat and ashore cheered the ship that sustained Uncle Sam's supremacy on the seas, and the skipper and crew that sailed her. For at least another year the international trophy is ours, and in all probability it will be many years before a British yatch again challenges for the cup.

The mishap of last Tuesday and the rather remarkable action of Lord Dunraven on Thursday will not further the interests of international sport.

KILLED ON THE RAILROAD.—Last Wednesday night Harry Davis, a son of Owen R. Davis, of North Hartley street, York, was killed on the Pennsylvania railroad a short distance west of Bird-in-hand. Just how the accident occurred is not known. The crew of an extra freight train found his body lying on the track. It is supposed that he was walking on the track and was struck by an eastbound train.

The father of the unfortunate young man is well known to many of our older citizens, having resided here many years ago.

THE PEACH BELT.—The dealers in the fruit belt in the Blue Ridge mountains have had an exciting and profitable season. The Zephyr says that peaches throughout the belt are being sold to local buyers from $1 to $1.25 per crate. At Smithsburg the demand and competition was so great that the agents were forced to adopt the auction plan. The result was a spirited time among the commission men from the half dozen cities. Prices ranged from 75 cents up. Midvale is forwarding on an average of two carloads a day. John R. Frantz exhibited the jumbo peach of this year's crop, Saturday evening. It measured 11½ inches around and weighed 11½ ounces.

THE Assessors of York county have completed the registration of voters for the coming election. A computation of the returns shows York county to have 27,806 voters, an increase of 1,558 voters since last year's registration.

HOLTZ Brothers are changing their (formerly Myers') mill, near New Chester, from the burr process to the roller system. The McAnulty Milling Machinery Works, of Manheim, through their representative, received the contract and is now placing the machinery in position. The capacity of the mill is 40 barrels per day, and when finished will be one of the best equipped in this section of the state.

ON Saturday, while Jesse Cashman, who lives on A. S. Himes' farm at the toll gate, was trying to drive home a bull that had gotten out of the yard, he was attacked by the animal and thrown to the ground and his head considerably bruised. Some men close by ran to his assistance and the animal was driven away without doing further injury.—New Oxford Item.

WHILST at work in the field on Tuesday, Mr. John Wagner, an aged citizen of Mountpleasant twp., was stricken to the ground with paralysis. He was carried into the house and Dr. J. L. Sheetz summoned, who upon examination, found Mr. Wagner in a very critical condition, the left side of his body being entirely helpless.

LAST Saturday's pay roll at the Steelton works reached the highest mark in the history of the works—$105,205. There are 4704 names on the roll, the largest number ever employed at the works. One year ago the pay roll amounted to $73,000.

FRANK MUSSER, the young man who had his arm torn off by the breaking of a cable on Pott's hill, Lancaster county, received a verdict against the Traction Company of $15,541. A former verdict was $18,000.

LAST week Revenue Collector Shearer, of the Ninth District, opened war on the sellers of ambrosia and other mild malt liquors with the arrest of Jacob Bowman, of Monterey, Lancaster county. The department at Washington has ruled for years that the sellers of ambrosia, hop bitters, ale, malt hop phosphate, and other light malt drinks must pay a United States government license, refusal to do so subjecting the persons selling to heavy fines and imprisonment. In the last two months a number of people, who have been detected selling, have complied with the law and taken out special tax stamps as required by the government. The penalty is not less than $100 nor more than $1000 and an imprisonment of not less than 30 days or more than two years. Numerous other arrests will follow Bowman's.

MISS OLLIE BIERLY, of Highfield, is lying at the point of death, with her throat cut almost from ear to ear, the result of a strange accident. She was carrying four large crocks just purchased at a store, and fell while crossing the railroad track. The crocks were broken and she fell upon them, the razor-like points cutting her throat severely, severing the external jugular vein and several large arteries in the neck.

THE Law School will remain in Carlisle permanently. That has been fully decided upon.

THE Presbyterian Synod of Pennsylvania will meet in annual session in the Butler Presbyterian church, York, on Thursday, October 17, and the present indications are for a week's session. The synod is one of the largest the church has and will be attended by probably 300 ministers and elders.

ON Saturday evening there arrived in Carlisle a foreign missionary, who during nineteen years has had but two vacations, and those a long time apart. The reverend gentleman was Julius Soper, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who has been a missionary in Japan, and during the three years past has had charge of the work in Hakodate, on the island of Yesso.

A HEAVY frost prevailed along the middle division of the Pennsylvania Railroad last Saturday night, trains reaching Harrisburg early Sunday morning were white and trainmen are said to have suffered from the cold. In the vicinity of Harrisburg grape vines were nipped and chestnuts were picked from the ground. The frost, however, did not do much damage.

MISS ANNIE FORREST, of Littlestown, who spent five years as a missionary in Japan, and who was compelled to quit on account of an affection of the eyes, is now engaged in missionary work in the bounds of the Maryland Conference of the M. P. Church.

THE Liberty Bell special train was at Arcola, Ill., on the way to Atlanta, and about 2,000 people gathered to see it. While Manager Knapp was giving a history of the bell, and the guides were hoisting it preparatory to ring it, a man named Matthews brushed through the crowd and struck the lower rim three hard blows with a sledge hammer, making three dents in it. The bell was considerably damaged. The man has been arrested and will be taken to Springfield.

ABOUT a week ago Edward Fahnestock, of Chambersburg, was missed from his home and is still missing. He has left no trace whatever and no one knows where to turn next in the search for him. Circulars with his picture and description were sent out this afternoon. Friday afternoon a second letter written by Fahnestock in August was found in his room. It is lengthy and in the nature of an exhortation to young men as to resisting temptation and leading Godly lives. It is said he intimated that he was tired of life and might end his. Chief of Police Swisher had printed a large number of circulars containing the picture and description of Fahnestock and mailed them to all towns within a large radius of Chambersburg.

WAGES OF 50,000 ADVANCED.

Increase of Two Per Cent. to the Iron Workers.

The wages of 50,000 men who work in the union iron mills of America, Pittsburg, for September and October have been fixed by representatives of the Merchants' Bar-Iron Association and the Amalgamated Iron and Steel Workers. The settlement gives all employes in the finishing department an advance of 2 per cent. The rate for puddling is put at $4.25, the present rate, under the adjustment.

At the next bi-monthly settlement wages of all the puddlers and finishers will go up at least 2 per cent. more. The raise is only 2 per cent. because many low-priced contracts were filled during July and August.

ELECTRIC MATTERS.—The last issue of the Westminster Advocate has the following:

In a letter to President Shriver, of the Westminster and Union Mills Electric Railway Company, received this week, Col. Alex. R. Anderson, the promoter of the Washington and Gettysburg road, says he has matters arranged to organize a construction company, which will make a survey of the route, etc., and that he expects it to be organized shortly.

THE annual re-union of the Presbyterians of the Cumberland Valley was held at Mont Alto Park last Thursday. About five thousand persons were on the grounds. Addresses were made by E. D. Warfield, president of Lafayette College; Professor J. R. Dill, Philadelphia; Rev. W. H. Roberts and Rev. J. P. L. Kumler, of Pittsburg.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

It Nominates Strong Candidates for State Treasurer and for the Superior Court—Resolutions Which Mean Something and are to the Point.

On the calling of the roll of the Democratic State convention in Williamsport, last Wedneday, every one of the 454 delegates responded either in person on by proxy.

The ticket nominated is as follows:

For State Treasurer, B. F. Meyers, of Dauphin.

For Judges of Superior Court, Harman Yerkes, of Bucks; J. S. Moorhead, of Westmoreland; C. H. Noyes, of Warren; P. P. Smith, of Lackawanna; O. P. Bechtel, of Schuylkill; Christopher Magee, of Allegheny.

The roll call over, Mr. Wright introduced ex-State Chairman Stranahan, of Mercer county, who has been chosen for temporary presiding officer. Mr. Stranahan in a businesslike way thanked the convention for the honor conferred upon him. He said that it was neither his province nor desire to delay work with a protracted speech, but he could not refrain from congratulating the party on the good attendance and evident interest of the delegates and the manifest harmony that was visible on every hand. He declared that returning business prosperity, the steady increase in wages and the favorable prospects were all due to the beneficent effects of Democratic Administration, and invoked that spirit of harmony that promises to be for the best interest of Democracy at large and the Democrats of Pennsylvania in general.

The Organization committee presented the name of John M. Garman, of Luzerne, for permanent chairman, and that choice was ratified without a dissenting vote.

Mr. Garman said, in part, "This convention is composed of the representatives of almost a half-million Democratic voters—constituting a party strong enough, if thoroughly united, to make Pennsylvania's political battles uncertain, even when the enemy presents an unbroken front, and to make victory highly probable when the opposition is torn by internal dissensions and violent factional strife.

"Contrast this convention with the one that met two weeks ago in the city of Harrisburg. For weeks, yea, months, nearly one-half of the Republican forces were engaged with the other half in a bitter struggle for supremacy. It was an uncomprising battle of factions. You read and heard their respective opinions of each other. You heard their charges and counter charges of corruption and dishonor, and doubtless believed all the charges to be true."

Nominations being in order, Mr. Singerly briefly presented the name of ex-Congressman B. F. Meyers, of Dauphin county, for State Treasurer. There was no other name, and Mr. Meyers was nominated by acclamation.

There were 17 candidates for the judicial nominations. On the first ballot for the judgeship nominations, the following gentleman were chosen: Yerkes, Moorehead, Smith, Noyes and Bechtel, each receiving more than the necessary 227 votes.

Another ballot was taken to nominate a sixth candidate, and it resulted: Magee 170, Bower 142, all of the other candidates, with the exception of Rose, announcing their withdrawal. Though the vote of neither Messrs. Magee nor Bower reached a majority of the convention (227), Chairman Garman recognized the selection of Magee, and declared him to be the sixth nominee.

The resolution committee reported the resolutions found in another column which were adopted without a dissenting vote.

A brick warehouse, at Lancaster, owned by R. Brubaker and J. F. Brimmer and occupied by Amos B. Hostetter and John F. Brimmer, was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. Loss on warehouse, $10,000. Hostetter had sixty-five thousand dollars worth of tobacco in the warehouses and Brimmer fifty-five thousand, partially insured. Fire of incendiary origin.

SWEPT BY A CYCLONE.—Of approbation to the pinnacle of popularity, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has acquired a commanding position, which has occasionally made it a bright and shining mark for knaves, whoseek to foist upon the community spurious compounds in the guise akin to that of the real article. These are mostly local bitters or tonics of great impurity, and, of course, devoid of medicinal efficacy. Beware of them and get the genuine Bitters, a real remedy for malaria, rheumatism, kidney trouble, dyspepsia, nervousness, constipation and biliousness. Physicians of eminence everywhere commend the great invigorant, both for its remedial properties and its purity. A wineglass thrice a day will soon bring vigor and regularity to a disordered and enfeebled system.

MR. ADAM MYERS, of Reading township, while hewing a log recently, cut an ugly gash in one of his knees.

ONE advantage of taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify the blood is that you need not infringe upon your hours of labor nor deny yourself any food that agrees with you. In a word, you are not compelled to starve or loaf, while taking it. These are recommendations worth considering.

MR. JOS. S. CORNMAN, of Hanover, has gone to Harrisburg where he is to connect himself with the Pennsylvania Methodist, a religious paper devoted the interests of the M. E. church.

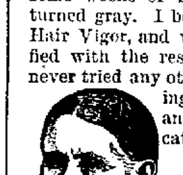
RELIEF IN SIX HOURS.—Distressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the "New Great South American Kidney Cure." This new remedy is a great surprise on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidney, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by J. M. Huber, Druggist Gettysburg, Pa.



Well Satisfied with Ayer's Hair Vigor.

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray. I began using Ayer's Hair Vigor, and was so well satisfied with the results that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It requires only an occasional application of AYER'S Hair Vigor to keep my hair of good color, to remove dandruff, to heal itching humors, and prevent the hair from falling out. I never hesitate to recommend Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Nebr.

MR. J. W. Gitt, of Hanover, won the suit in the York county courts resulting from the Town Council ordering the removal of a shade tree in front of his premises.

USE IT IN TIME.—Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

THE P. C. Wiest Company, of York, makes 7 tons of caramels a day.

ITCH on human and horses and all animals cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. This never fails. Sold by J. M. Huber, Druggist, Gettysburg, Pa.

FRANK Koons, an employe of Jacoby's planing mill, York, while walking along the W. M. R. R., spied a clover stalk on which there were fourteen clusters of five leaves, and sixteen of four leaves.

WHAT A WORD WILL DO.—Byron reminds us that a word is enough to rouse mankind to mutual slaughter. Yes, there is power in a word—Marathon, for instance, Waterloo, Gettysburg, Appomatox. Great battles these, but what a great battle is going on in many a sick and suffering body. In yours, perhaps. Take courage. You can win. Call to your aid Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts powerfully upon the liver, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities; cures all humors from a common Blotch or Eruption to the worst Scrofula, Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially potent in curing Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, "White Swellings" and Enlarged Glands.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure permanently constipation, biliousness, sick headache and indigestion.

The Hanover Fair.

The Hanover Fair always interesting, was especially good this year Racing, an always important feature, was done by fast horses, among them some noted ones

As an exhibition, the Fair was an unqualified success In most of the departments there are full displays and in a few larger ones than usual

The live stock show was a good one Cattle stalls were filled, and the showing, is said by those competent to judge was as fine as ever before at this fair Hogs, as previously, were shown in large numbers

The poultry display was large and fine, the coops all being filled and many of the larger ones divided into two

Thursday was the big day, and it is estimated that 15 000 people attended Racing was the attractive feature The best time made was 2 20¼

Apply Lime in the Fall.

It is a Soil-Enricher and This is the Time to Use It—Makes Heavy Soils Lighter.

The best period of the year for the application of lime to the soil is in the fall. Lime is a plant food, and is essential, and while it exists to a more or less entent in all soils, yet it proves beneficial on both heavy and light lands, assisting to render heavy soils lighter and light soils heavier. It does not take the place of phosphates, nor can it be substituted for wood ashes, which contain potash and phosphoric acid from the soil by inducing chemical processes by which the insoluble matter of the soil is changed in composition, thereby becoming of a condition which permits of the use of such foods by plants. The small cost of lime, and it lasting effects in the soil, should stimulate farmers to use it more liberally than is done, and as it benefits nearly all kinds of crops and injures no soils, its use is one that results in benefit, and especially when applied on soils intended for crops that have an abundance of lime in their composition.

The tendency of lime is to work down into the soil, every rain carrying it deeper. Lime that is recently soaked is a hydrate, and is easily diffused by the rains, but after exposure in the soil it reverts to its original condition of carbonate, being then again insoluble. During these changes, when losing its characteristic as a hydrate to become a carbonate, it compels other substances in the soil to change their forms also. When stone lime is burnt, in order to produce lime, the carbonic acid is driven off, and lime is the result. When the lime absorbs moisture from the air (air-slacking) it combines chemically with the water, forming a hydrate. In this condition it is applied to the soil. But the lime will not remain a hydrate, preferring to again become a carbonate, and it is this desire (or affinity) to combine with carbonic acid that prompts it to force the chemical changes in the soil which release plant food existing in the soil, but which plants cannot reduce.

It requires quite a time for lime to complete its work in the soil. Applied in the fall it will, with the aid of the frost, have the land in excellent condition by spring, especially if the lime is broadcasted over the surface of the soil after a green crop has been turned under. It is more serviceable when used in connection with green manurial crops than under any other conditions. On light, sandy soils it always gives excellent results, permitting of the growing of clover on soils that usually give but small crops, and on heavy soils the land is made more friable and less tenacious. Some farmers apply lime once in three or four years. It is better to apply forty bushels per acre in the fall and ten bushels every year thereafter than to omit it at any time, as the most benefit from lime is when it is in the condition of a hydrate.—Phila. Record.

Preserving Eggs.

Cold Storage and the Lime Process Are Best.

There is no known process by which eggs can be kept absolutely as good as when they are first laid. So far as is at present known, cold storage is the best way to keep them a long time, but the best of these do not bring the price that fresh eggs do, because they are not as good for any purpose.

The lime process is probably the best one that can be used under ordinary circumstances. After the eggs are placed in the solution keep them in a cool place until they are to be taken out to be used.

The following is the formula for this method:

Take 24 gallons of water, 2 pounds of unslacked lime and 4 pounds of salt, or in that proportion, according to the quantity of eggs to be preserved. Stir several times daily and then let stand until the liquor has settled and is perfectly clear. Draw or carefully dip off the clear liquid, leaving the sediment at the bottom.

Take for the above amount of liquid 5 ounces each of baking soda, cream of tartar, saltpeter and borax and an ounce of alum. Pulverize and mix these and dissolve in a gallon of boiling water, and add to the mixture about 20 gallons of pure limewater. This will about fill a cider barrel. Put the eggs in carefully, so as not to crack any of the shells, letting the water always stand an inch above the eggs, which can be done by placing a barrel head a little smaller upon them and weighting it. This amount of liquid will preserve 150 dozen eggs. It is not necessary to wait to get a full barrel or smaller package of eggs, but they can be put in at any time that they can be obtained fresh. The same liquid should be used only once.

A CRISP CRUST Is the making of a pie. The making of a crisp crust depends largely upon the shortening. Use COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, instead of lard, and sogginess will be an unknown element in your pastry. Cottolene should always be economically used—two-thirds as much Cottolene as you would ordinarily use of lard or butter, being ample to produce the most desirable results. The saving in a year represents a considerable item. There are many imitations of COTTOLENE; you should therefore be careful to get the genuine.

Sold everywhere in tins, with trade-marks—"Cottolene" and steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—on every tin. Made only by Housekeeping Hints.

Rub vinegar on the isinglass in stove doors, and so have them clean.

The best remedy for odorous drain pipes is copperas dissolved in water and poured slowly through them.

To clean stovepipes put a piece of zinc on the red hot coals. The soot is removed by the vapor which will be produced.

To get clear of rats, besides using traps, cats or dogs, try chloride of lime. It is said they never come where that is placed.

Mix turpentine in water with which the floors are scrubbed, and thus escape buffalo moths and carpet worms.

Kerosene oil applied to flannel is an excellent thing with which to rub old furniture, or clean paint, particularly the dirty finger marks around door handles.

Do not let stale flowers remain in a sick-room.

Do not take the risk of lighting a fire in a stove or furnace, not known to be safe, or one which is not understood.

Do not leave vegetables in water after they are cooked.

When cleansing tin utensils, a small quantity of soda thrown into hot suds will be found almost equal to scouring.

Hay water sweetens tin, wooden and iron wares. This is made by boiling a little sweet hay in water.

The round-top trunk is quite gone by, and the newest and most convenient has no tray in the lid, but is so arranged that it can be set close against the wall and opened without being moved forward.

Either washing soda or borax is said to be better to use in the water for bathing purposes than ammonia, which hardens the skin and makes it crack, unless used very sparingly at infrequent periods.

Monograms worked in the finest French embroidery are rapidly becoming popular as decorations for bed spreads and pillow covers.

Patent leather shoes are really beneficial for those who have dry feet. While moist feet are a real affliction, to have them perspire occasionally softens them and prevents callous spots forming.

Scarfs are no longer used to drape pictures and chairs. For the mantel embroidered china silk crepes are popular.

Muslin curtains, figured and ruffled, look well for narrow windows in apartments.

All embroidered articles, such as tray cloths, bureau scarfs, 5 o'clock tea cloths, silk board covers and the like should be washed by themselves.

Linen undergarments that are badly stained with perspiration should have such spots soaked and washed in tepid water, without soap or soda, before adding them to the regular washing.

Fruit cake, if it is to be kept any length of time before eating—and a good fruit cake is always improved by so doing—should only be iced as it is needed.

A Heroic Physician.

There are doctors and doctors, but one of the most intelligent of all these friends of humanity was one who had the courage recently to give a bit of advice to the head of a family not many miles from New York. The head of the family was robust but exacting, healthy but irritable—in short, a veritable Hector.

"I don't know what is the matter with my family, doctor," he said, "but my wife is nervous, my children are suffering from something, I don't know what—in fact, the whole house is upset. Even the servants seem vacillating and bordering on nervous prostration."

"I think it would be all right," said the doctor, "if you take a six months' tour of Europe—alone."

"I?" cried paterfamilias. "The only well member of the family?"

"Yes," said the doctor, gravely. "You ought to travel—for the health of your family."—From the "Editor's Drawer," in Harper's Magazine for August.

LINCOLN AS A LOVER.

Abraham Lincoln's sentimental perplexities are to be shown in an article of singular interest which John Gilmer Speed has written from unpublished letters of Lincoln to Joshua Speed, for the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. The article will show that the great President was not steady in the affairs of the heart, that he floundered in his love, and finally induced his friend Speed to marry and tell him (Lincoln) whether marriage was a failure or not.

"Say 'Your Grace,' Boy."

The Duke of Hamilton's harriers hunt during the season in this neighborhood, and the "meet" is a welcome relief from the monotony of rural life. On one of these occasions, not long ago, when the Duke himself was present, the services of a bright Suffolk youth were requisitioned to hold his Grace's horse. The Duke addressed some kindly remark to the boy, who promptly replied, "Yes, sir." "Why don't you say 'Your Grace'?" interposed one of the attendant horsemen. "Say 'Your Grace,' boy!" Whereupon the youngster reverently put his hands together, and audibly recited the words, "For what we are about to receive," etc. Not so bad for silly Suffolk! It needs scarcely be said that he presently had due cause for his thankfulness.—The Gentleman's Magazine.

FREDERIC REMINGTON confesses in the August Harper's that he is a "collector" of cowboys, and that his particular bric-a-brac is as much to him as "gems and porcelains are to some others." Mr. Remington has recently added another specimen to his collection, the "Crack Cowboy of Florida," about whom he writes and whom he describes with enthusiasm. The Crack Cowboy is not the bold, free rider of the Southwest. He is not above lying in wait in a bush and shooting his enemy in the back. He is, in fact, about as lawless and unprincipled as circumstances permit. Still, according to the illustrated natural history of Mr. Remington, he is an interesting and picturesque specimen, and one not caught hitherto.

How To Keep A Man's Love.

Do not buy his cigars.

Do not buy his neckties.

Do not buy his suspenders.

Do not crease his trousers.

Do not criticise his hat or ask him where he got it.

Do not ask him at breakfast what he wants for dinner.

Do not insist upon his going to church simply to please you.

Do not tell him that your boy, if you have one, takes his temper from him.

Do not wear a bonnet when he thinks you look better in a hat, and vice versa.

Do not ask him when he comes home in the evening what he has been doing all day.

Do not persist in his giving you the same attentions he gave you before you got him.

Do not cross him in his opinions. For heaven's sake, let him think he is smarter than anybody else.

Do not tell him what your dearest woman friend has said about her husband's good qualities.

Do not tell him that every woman you know has more clothes and has a better time than you.—Chicago Chronicle.

"HE seems to visit you quite frequently. But do you think him steady?" "Steady? Well, I should say he was. He calls every evening."

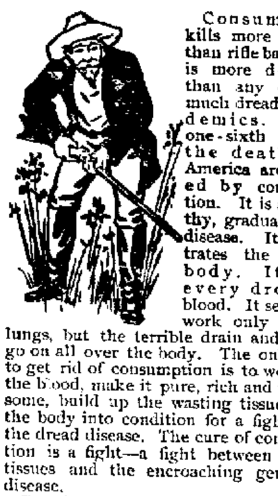
"So you've taken to cycling at last, have you?" "How did you find that out?" "I saw you on your wheel yesterday." "By Jove! I'm glad to hear that. All the rest of my friends happened to see me when I was off."



Consumption kills more people than rifle balls. It is more deadly than any of the much dreaded epidemics. Fully one-sixth of all the deaths in America are caused by consumption. It is a stealthy, gradual, slow disease. It penetrates the whole body. It is in every drop of blood. It seems to work only at the lungs, but the terrible drain and waste go on all over the body. The only way to get rid of consumption is to work on the blood, make it pure, rich and wholesome, build up the wasting tissues, put the body into condition for a fight with the dread disease. The cure of consumption is a fight—a fight between sound tissues and the encroaching germs of disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery fights on the right side. It drives the germs back, forces them out of the body. It will cure 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption if it is taken during the early stages of the disease. Its first action is to put the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys into good working order. That makes digestion good and assimilation quick and thorough. It makes sound healthy flesh. That is half the battle. That makes the "Discovery" good for those who have not consumption, but who are lighter and less robust than they ought to be.

A large book of 160 pages, telling all about this wonderful medicine, will be mailed free on receipt of this notice and 6 cents to cover postage by WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

CAUTION.—Buy of reliable dealers. With any others, something else that pays them better will probably be urged as "just as good."

Waited Sixty Years to Wed.

Groom Wanted to Raise the Mortgage on His Farm First.

A romance involving a strange devotion is concealed behind the marriage of James Ewing and Margaret Christy, which took place at Sharon, Pa., last Saturday. He is 85 years old and the bride just four score. Sixty years ago these two were in love, but Ewing, then a strong young man of 25, hesitated to take his sweetheart for a wife, fearing he could not properly support her. They determined to wait a few years or until they had money enough to keep house with. The years went by rapidly, and the lovers did not seem to think they could afford to get married.

Ewing bought a farm up in Crawford county, and he has lived there ever since. In the meantime the two made a solemn vow that as soon as they possessed the necessary funds they would become husband and wife. After waiting just 60 years, each remaining true to the pledge, they on Saturday went to Justice Snodgrass, of Jamestown, and were wedded. Ewing raised the mortgage on his farm on the day of marriage

—A Baptist preacher in Georgia refuses to baptize converts except in running water.

—An Arkansas hunter has a hound that will catch his tail in his teeth and roll down a hill faster than any other hound in the pack can run.

—A Maine mother has an old slipper, still in use, which has spanked six generations of her family.

—Michigan has a man who is so fat that he can't fall down hard enough to hurt himself. He is known as the human spheroid.

—A Delaware peach grower has found an apple with fuzz on it growing on a peach tree.

—An Indian calf, now two months old, has hoofs like a horse.

—A Chicago man paid his first visit to St. Louis in July, and he liked it so well that he has gone there to live.

—A Texas preacher threw a Bible at a deacon who started to run away with the collection, and knocked him down the front steps of the church, breaking his leg in two places.—New York Sun.

A Fruit Diet.

The hygienic importance of a fruit diet is becoming more and more recognized. If only ripe and good fruits are used, the natural appetite for them may be trusted almost implicitly. In many instances, a supposed disorganization of the system through the generous consumption of some favorite fruit food may be but the work of clearing and regenerating the body—doing that which actually needed to be done, and which is much better performed in that way than through the agency of drugs and dosing. The habitual eater of fruit rarely complains of "a torpid liver" or sluggish action of the bodily forces. And it is this torpidity and sluggishness which is responsible for many forms of physical derangement.—Good Housekeeping.

CURE FOR HEADACHE.—As a remedy for all forms of Headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In case of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only Fifty cents at J. M. Huber's Drug Store. 2

Record Your Deeds.

By examination of the late Act of the Legislature, approved May, 19th, A. D., 1893, it will be seen that all Deeds and Conveyances made and executed after the passage of this Act, SHALL be recorded in the office for the Recording of Deeds, etc., within ninety days, or else be adjudged fraudulent and void as to any subsequent purchaser.

All persons holding unrecorded Deeds will see the importance of having them recorded without delay.

THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELTS AND APPLIANCES INSURE TO THE SICK THESE GREAT POINTS OF ADVANTAGE OVER ALL IMITATORS

The Electric Current can be immediately felt, although soothing to the most sensitive. The strength of the current is under the complete control of the wearer, so much so that a child may be treated and cured by the same power of Belt necessary for the strongest man.

It can be changed from positive to negative current in a moment.

They have and are curing thousands of cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Diseases and Nervous Ailments in man and woman (from any cause) where long continued medical treatment failed to cure.

NO MEDICINES ARE NECESSARY.

Avoid all cheap (so called) Electric Belts and fraudulent imitations of our Electric Belts and Appliances, as these are an imposition, upon the suffering.

THE OWEN ELECTRIC TRUSS is the most retentive and curative Truss made for the radical cure of Rupture.

Inclose six cents and send for our Large Illustrated Catalogue in English, German, Swedish or Norwegian languages; containing medical facts, sworn statements of cures made and descriptions of Belts and Appliances. Address

Adams and York Counties.

I desire to call your attention to my

SPRING RUN

BONE PHOSPHATE.

My goods are made from the BEST MATERIALS the market affords, being largely composed of Animal Bone.

In order to compete with other manufacturers, I have—although a first-class article—reduced the price and am selling at a very small profit. I employ no agents, thereby giving to the consumers the advantage of the agents fees in making their purchases. Call and examine before purchasing elsewhere. I shall deem it an especial favor to exhibit the material from which Spring Run Bone Phosphate is made.

SPRING RUN BONE PHOSPHATE is warranted pure and equal to any other fertilizer on the market.

For sale only at the SPRING RUN BONE PHOSPHATE MANUFACTORY, at Abbottstown. (Will deliver on cars for parties desiring to ship by railroad.) Address
